The wait is over...

The wait is finally over to see Clarence Marshall's new You-Tube Video release 'Don't Make Me Wait'. Clarence has been working hard on his new Album, not only getting right sound but finally a track that showcases his talent as a dancer. The album is a collaboration between Danny Rafael at D:Raf Recording Studio, Michael Zammit at Airwaves Recording Studio and of course the Talented Clarence Marshall. Though this track was written and produced by D:Raf, Clarence has brought in the big guns from the 'Ministry of Dance' to give his fans the full spectrum of his dedication to the Australian music industry.

"I had come up with this track, straight after my work on 'I Just Want to Love You', I really wanted to see where Clarence would take it"

-DANNY RAFAEL

“I love the track, it’s really different for me”, remarks Clarence. The song is reminiscent of the Commodores, Cool & The Gang, and Prince mixed in with new production styles like Mark Ronson.

“I had come up with this track, straight after my work on ‘I Just Want to Love You’, I really wanted to see where Clarence would take it”, proudly explains D:Raf. The track definitely highlights Clarence’s voice and the innovation at D:Raf Recording Studio, in getting the right sound to complement the genre.

There is a huge buzz at D:Raf Recording Studio, with the networking of not only different artist but also producers. There is a strong culture to keep busy in the studio, constantly working on different project with different people. “I think, as any other producer, we need to constantly be creative in everything we do”, suggests D:Raf.

Clarence is such a great artist to work with, he is experienced enough to put forward constructive input and also step back and allow music producers to weave their creativity in the studio, this track shows just that.

At D:Raf Recording Studio, artists always have the final say on the projects finished product. Not only are you booking in for a recording session, but you work one-on-one with Danny Rafael, who offers musical experience, performance, composing, mixing, arranging, mastering and of course professionalism. If your looking for a studio, that is not focussed on the time, but rather creativity and quality, look no further than D:Raf Recording Studio for your next audio project.

“Danny is extremely creative and always up to date with the latest sounds. I’m always blown away by the end result”.
